Would Solve World Famine Problem

By WILLIAM N. OATIS
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — A high U.N. official called today for bigger crops to head off famine and better statistics to illuminate the world's population problem.

Paul G. Hoffman, administrator of the U.N. Development Program — UNDP — told the UNDP governing council:

"Greatly increased production of foodstuffs is absolutely essential not only to avert the growing threat of eventual widespread famine, but also to raise present low nutritional levels which impair the health and hobble the productivity of hundreds of millions of people throughout the low-income lands."

"A problem, whose overriding importance is beyond dispute, concerns the absolute necessity of bringing population growth and economic productivity into far better balance than at present."

"One prerequisite for dealing with this problem is the stockpiling of more complete and accurate information on what is widely known as the 'population explosion' — its size, scope, trend and impact."

Hoffman said the UNDP was making a modest and exploratory contribution by helping regional and national agencies carry out detailed studies of population trends and their implications for development planning. He also noted that it had advised India on that country's family-planning program.

As for food production, he reported that the UNDP was supporting 910 agricultural projects in 104 countries and territories and that such projects constituted the largest single share of its work, done in collaboration with U.N. specialized agencies.

Hoffman, once an American automobile manufacturer and later Marshall Plan administrator, prepared his speech for the opening meeting of the 17-day third session of the 37-nation governing council.

Christmas Baskets for Needy

Tired workers take a well earned break from boxing up Christmas baskets for the needy with food and merchandise bought from funds derived from the Lions Club annual Xmas auction. Each year, under the direction of the Recreation Department, a youth group within the City takes the many items furnished by the Lions and separate and box these goods, getting them ready for delivery on Christmas Eve.

For the past two years, this was done by members of the Jr. Rifle Club, with this year's baskets being packed by members of the Hope Youth Center, the Key Club and Boy Scout troop 91. In addition, Key Club and Youth Center members collected over 200 toys which they repaired and repainted and delivered with the baskets.

The group handled over 6,000 cans besides flour, meal, shortening, ham, candy, fruit cakes, oranges and apples and many, many other necessary items. The job took almost two full days with every boy doing his job well. Pictured, l to r are Steve Gough, Jimmy Singleton, Bruce Ramsey (bending over), Chuck Key, Ronnie Taylor, Steve Caldwell, Steve Taylor, Ken Trout, Robin Bresler and Fredo Ellis. Many other members of the three organizations are not pictured.

Prosecution of Bobby Baker Starts

By RAYMOND J. CROWLEY
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department begins its prosecution in the Bobby Baker trial today after the jurors get their baggage squared away for an expected long stay in the federal courthouse.

Baker, 38, former secretary to Senate Democrats, is charged with income tax evasion, larceny, larceny after trust, interstate transportation of stolen money and conspiracy. He has pleaded innocent.

Jurors for the case were chosen Monday amid extraordinary precautions against out-of-court influences.

The 12 — six men and six women — are government workers except one who is a retired Census Bureau clerk. Along with six alternates, they were told Monday by U.S. Dist. Judge Oliver Gasch:

"You may go home tonight. But don't read any newspapers, don't listen to the radio or TV, don't discuss this case, even with a loved husband or wife."

"Pack your bags and be back at 9:30 in the morning."

Beginning today the jurors are to be sequestered, meaning locked up, for the duration of the trial expected to last 2 to 2½ months. They will sleep in hotel-type accommodations on the seventh and eighth floors of the big U. S. courthouse, and eat in the court cafeteria, or in hotels, in the company of marshals.

In decreeing this, Judge Gasch said, "I must take note of the decision in the Sheppard case." In that decision, the Supreme Court overturned the murder conviction of Dr. Samuel H. Sheppard on the ground, among other things, that prejudicial publicity interfered with his constitutional rights.

Baker, clad in dark gray suit and black tie, smiled often as he conferred with his chief lawyer, Edward Bennett Williams, during the jury selection.

Before the jurors and alternates — four men and two women — were selected, Gasch went to unusual lengths in his quest for what he termed "a completely impartial jury."

Holdings Released by Rockefeller

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Winthrop Rockefeller, who today becomes governor of Arkansas, fulfilled one of his promises Monday night by releasing what he said was a complete list of his holdings in the state.

The Republican listed 14 major holdings and 13 other investments of smaller amounts in land, bonds and shares of stock. One listed in other investments was 15,065 shares of National Old Line Insurance Co. stock.

The report said Winrock Farms consisted of 24,597 acres, of which 15,887 acres was devoted to crops and the rest to the raising of cattle. He said most of the land was purchased between 1953 and 1960 and the latest addition was in 1965.

Rockefeller said he owned 56 per cent of the common stock and 82 per cent of the preferred stock in Winrock Enterprises, Inc., the parent company of Winrock Realty Co.

Among the other holdings of Winrock Enterprises, Inc., listed were:

— 81 per cent interest in Ralph Jones Co., Inc. of Siloam Springs, manufacturer of plastic pipe and other plastic products; 75 per cent of Dalewin, Inc., of Texarkana, real estate development; 16 per cent of J. B. Hunt Co. of Stuttgart, compressed packaged poultry litter; and 50 per cent of Concrete Casting Corp. of Arkansas at North Little Rock, manufacturer of precast and prestressed concrete products.

Rockefeller also said he owned 54 per cent of the stock in Pleasant Valley, Inc., of Little Rock which is developing in the western part of Little Rock.

He fully owns Petit Jean Air Service, Inc., and Arkansas Horizons, Inc., all firms based at his farm.

Other holdings include 50 per cent partnership in Winrock Grass Farm; partnership of Dawn Hill Country Club Resort with Ralph Jones of Siloam Springs; 100 per cent of Tower Press, Inc., a commercial printing firm; and 50 per cent of Arkansas Realty Co. of Little Rock.

State Asked to Take Over Advertising

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Legislative Council was asked Monday to study the feasibility of the creation of a state advertising agency staffed with experts.

The director and assistant director of the Publicly and Parks Commission explained the use of private advertising agencies at a hearing before the Legislative Joint Auditing Committee.

The commission's audit had been held up because of a 15 per cent fee paid the Tom Hockersmith Agency of Little Rock for placing commission publicity with various news media.

Sen. Bob Douglas of Texarkana said the firm placed $380,000 worth of advertising for the commission and received 15 per cent of the amount as a fee

Firm Assessed Wrongfully

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Chancellor Murray Reed ruled Monday that the Oklahoma Gas & Electric Co. at Fort Smith was wrongfully assessed use tax totaling $21,120 on out-of-state purchased equipment between 1962 and 1965.

Reed ordered damages of the amount and six per cent interest, or $950. The case is expected to be appealed to the state Supreme Court by the Revenue Department.

over the last two years.

Bob Evans, commission director, said the 15 per cent was, effect, a rebate on the price of advertising granted advertising firms by the media.

Lou Oberste, the assistant director, told the committee that an advertising agency obtained the discount and actually did all of the specialty work in preparing the ads.

He said he did not believe there was enough state advertising to require the hiring of specialists.

We Could Live, Die in Paper

NEW YORK (AP) — We may live and die in paper from now on.

Baby girls born to disposable diapers and wrapped in paper blankets may now grow into discards of toddler dresses, spend their adolescence in silceaway miniskirts, and eventually marry in throwaway wedding gowns.

Perhaps someone will even invent a paper shroud.

A new link in this paper chain was introduced Thursday by pretty mite-sized dolls wearing disposable children's wear designed by Margot West. They are cheap (less than $3), flame-proofed, tear and water resistant, and as charming and colorful as the pages of a picture book.

The maker, Joseph Love, who has kiddily tested them with his own progeny, swears they will survive four to five energetic wearings.

He enthusiastically lists these practicalities in wrapping wee-

Wedding Anniversary

Appearance Rare Thing for Women

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

Fashion Editor NEW YORK (AP) — Constructing a woman's appearance is a lot more complicated than assembling a rag, a bone and a tank of hair.

It takes several dozen brushes, paint pots, glue, glisteners, sequin strips, eye fringe, hair pieces, specially engineered lingerie that pushes up or flattens in, and a bulging wardrobe of outerwear conceived to deceive.

Just how the fraidy female creates some of her facades was demonstrated with microscopic cruelty Monday for fashion beauty writers here for the Coty program. It was a part of the American Designer spring previews being held throughout this week.

A plain face the size of a ballroom screen took on high cheek bones, and long thin nose with one brown brush. Sags and eye bags disappeared with a little white. So it went until the face was complete with satanic eyes and eyebrows, framed in hairpieces.

Then the face was denuded and repainted, this time getting a glow on with glitter powder, strips of sequins on the eyelids, even black and white tiger stripes under the eyes.

Designer Geoffrey Benne indicated that he was cooperating with the deceptive woman by driving her fashion silhouettes that did not necessarily conform to her own.

Whatever the style was, a copy of his Vatican vestments — called the Padre — or his big girl version of a little girl dress, it almost always did a good job of the figure, from narrow shoulders to wide, sometimes very wide, hemlines.

What Benne called his prophetic shape was a doll-waisted dress with side fullness that would easily camouflage that well-known occupational hazard, secretarial spread.

Along with these were skinny coats and slithery sheaths in wild silk prints, designed figuratively for the woman with nothing to hide. Hemlines in Benne's collection were very, very short — about five inches above the knee — for daytime, floor length and sweepingly full for evening.

ones in wood pulp:

Hems are shortened easily with scissors.

On trips the suitcase gradually empties leaving room for souvenirs.

After parties, ice cream-covered dresses can be thrown away with the paper napkins, table cloth, paper plates and drinking cups.

Halting occasionally to hoist up their not-yet-paper stockings, the paper dolls traveled the runways in little shifts bright with flowers, quaint with jungle animals, or sparkling with metallic paint and plastic trim. Some styles were straight and simple with collars, cuffs, buttons and pockets drawn on with a brush.

A paper wedding dress — entirely appropriate considering the brevity of some marriages — will be a part of Saturday's bridal fashion show scheduled by the New York couture group for style writers attending its press week activities this week.

Fabrics soft and airy, woolly, slinky and floaty were designer Marie McCarthy's choice for the Larry Aldrich collection shown earlier Thursday. Except for the prices, there was something to please everybody — the military influence, side button dresses, smashing combinations of colors, a kimono dresses and tents, a bit of romantic lace, and some wickedness.

HELEN HELP US!

by Helen Bottel

YOUTH ASKED FOR IT!

This column is for young people their problems and pleasures, their troubles and fun. As with the rest of Helen Help US!, it welcomes laughs but won't dodge a serious question with a brush-off.

Send your teenage questions to Helen Help US!, this newspaper.

MUCH ASKED QUESTION

Dear Helen: I have written to you about this problem four times. Please answer me in your column.

My boy friend and I broke up. I don't know why. I surely didn't want to, because I love him. Now he is going with the girl he went with before he met me.

If I don't get him back, life won't be worth living. I refuse to date other boys. If I can't have him, I won't have any. Sometimes I've thought of having an accident or something, so he'll be sorry and come to me. I'll try anything you suggest, Helen, but don't tell me to forget him because I can't. — HEARTBROKEN AND IN LOVE

Dear HALL: I haven't answered, honey, because I can only tell you what you don't want to hear: you MUST forget him! Or make a good pretense.

Mix, flirt, date other boys, smile, show him you don't care. In fact, you might take a leaf from his current girl's notebook. Did she retire in a corner and plan "accidents" when he dropped her? Not much! I'll bet she got mad first, and then "forgot" him while enjoying herself with the crowd. When a male sees others are interested, he begins to wonder why he was such a dope. It could happen to you!

It's your only way to travel: so try! Who knows, the detour may turn out to be the best road after all. — H.

Dear Helen: I'm in Military Academy, and have been going steady with a girl at home since June. How do you explain to a girl that you don't want to make her unhappy by restricting her while you're not there?

I'm crazy about her and don't want her thinking I'm trying to drop her or anything. Of course I don't go with other girls up here.

The reason I think she feels restricted is that she's forever goofing around with my friends on a little bit more than just friendly basis. Should I tell her it's okay? — M.U.L.

P.S. I don't understand girls very well.

Dear MUL: You don't understand yourself very well, chum. Honest now, aren't you a little sore because she is "goofing around with your friends" while you are stuck at a boys school? So you wonder if offering her a release from "steadiness" will shake her into being true? I doubt it.

You're expecting a lot when you ask a high school girl to go steady long-distance. Why not make it "when possible," and then neither of you will feel let down? — H.

Dear Helen: I dye my hair blonde and it is down my back, straight. I wear all the latest make-up. Because of this my relatives and parents think I look like a tramp. I started hanging around with girls who are tramps and word got out I was too. Then I met this boy who lives in another town. I lied to my folks so I'd be able to go with him.

After three dates of petting, he told me he loved me and couldn't go on without me. So I proved my love for him.

He promised to see me every week, but in a little while, he didn't come back any more. I tried to forget him but now I can't. I'm pregnant. My family would be disgraced if they knew. Should I go to see him and tell him, so we can decide together what to do? — DESPERATE AT 15

Dear Desperate: Tell your parents, and you three will decide together what to do, but don't expect cooperation from the boy. He only took what he thought was being passed around free. And he had every right to think so, if you petted with him from the first date. If you'll send me your address, I'll provide you with a list of homes for unwed mothers in your area. But I can't offer much sympathy. You asked for this! — H.

Television and Radio

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

AP Television-Radio Writer NEW YORK (AP) — There have been strong indications that the Hollywood fountains of creativity have been drying up a half-hour. Peter Jennings' Monday night there was evidence of a drought of alarming proportions.

CBS and NBC broadcast the first episodes of new comedy series. Each one was a spoof of "Superman" or "Batman" and their similarity, right down to the jokes, was disheartening. Neither was very amusing.

First came "Mr. Terrific" on CBS. Stephen Strimpell, who bears a remarkable resemblance to Red Buttons, plays Stanley Beamish, an extremely mild-mannered, weak-muscled filling station proprietor but also an agent for government secret projects. Given a special power pill, Stanley becomes a super-hero with muscles of steel and the ability to fly.

With the aid of the pills and a very loud laugh track, Stanley managed in a half-hour to defeat the bad guys and retrieve a secret power paralyzer which had gotten into the wrong hands.

This was followed by NBC's "Captain Nice." William Daniels plays Carter Nash, a meek, weak-muscled, bespectacled and girl-shy chemist who compounds a special power liquid. When he drinks it, he becomes briefly a super-hero with muscles of steel and the power to fly.

With the aid of the liquid and a loud sound track, he also managed to defeat the bad guys and at the end of the half hour his old mum was sewing him a proper Superman outfit.

ABC's news department began extending its early evening news report from 15 minutes to a half-hour. Peter Jennings' Monday night there was evidence of a drought of alarming proportions.

The program is broadcast in the East at 5:30 p.m., which gives it a head start over the other two networks but it has the disadvantage of being broadcast so early that many working people have not yet reached home.

All three networks will broadcast the President's State of the Union message at 9:30 p.m. EST, tonight, pre-empting regular programming. NBC has postponed its scheduled broadcast of the feature film, "The Ugly American," and will show a Martin and Lewis comedy, "Pardners," from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Recommended tonight: "The Beatles at Shea Stadium," ABC, 7:30-8:30 EST, a documentary on last summer's concert; "The Invaders," ABC, 8:30-9:30, premiere of a new series about an invasion from another planet.

Man 74 Weds

Child of 19

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS COVINGTON, Ky., (AP) — "You are both old enough to know the importance of the vow you have just taken," the justice of the peace said as he finished the wedding ceremony.

The bride was Irene Moseley, 19. The bridegroom was John H. Napier, 71. She kissed her husband three times for photographers and giggled that his mustache tickled.

Miss Moseley said after the ceremony Monday that her "childhood environment" had prepared her for such a wedding.

Miss Moseley's father, now 74, is 30 years older than his wife. He was 71—the same age as Irene's husband—when their youngest child was born three years ago.

Matson Is Outgunned by Youngster

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP)—The coach of Randy Matson, the world's best shotputter, said Monday the Texas A&M man-mountains needs several more months of practice to round into top form and should menace the 70-foot mark again this summer.

Charley Thomas, Aggie track coach, told the Associated Press in an interview, "I feel like Randy will better 70 feet and possibly hit 71 or 72 feet by this summer."

Matson was beaten for the first time last weekend. Oregon's Neal Steinhauer set an indoor world record with a heave of 66 feet, 6 3/4 inches in the All American Track and Field Games in San Francisco. The best Matson of Pampa, Tex., could do was 64 1/2."

Thomas disclosed that Matson will use a new type of shot for indoor meets when he competes this weekend at the Lubbock Indoor Track Meet.

Matson bought the shot in California after his defeat.

"The new shot feels better and is more the size of the outdoor shot," Thomas said. "This one is filled with mercury and is not as large as the one he was using. The one he was using was real slippery and was like holding a big marble."

Matson, who holds the shot record of 70 feet 7 inches, has been bothered by the large size of indoor shots which have a plastic covering so they will bounce on the boards. Thomas said he looks for Matson to do much better in Dallas and Fort Worth indoor meets where the floor is dirt and Matson can use the regular 16-pound iron ball.

Thomas said Matson is still bothered by a knee he injured while playing basketball last season.

"He can feel a little pain, particularly when he sits down in a car," Thomas said. "It usually doesn't bother him while he is throwing."

"His form and technique are just not up to par. It's a long time until July and August when most of the big meets will be held."

Thomas said Matson threw the ball a "foot better than he has ever thrown this early in the season" in San Francisco, but was beaten because he was "just not ready. Neal was."

Little League Basketball Play Starts

Little League Basketball play got underway Saturday morning at Jones Field House with a couple of practice games. The Cool Cats took on the Hot Rods and the Dirt Diggers played the Bo-Diddies. The practice games proved that the teams are quite well balanced this year and should definitely provide some interesting basketball.

This year's crop of young basketballers has exceptional size for the age group it encompasses. The league has several big strong boys and a number of smaller but very skilled youngsters.

Student coaches for the teams are Jerry Don Still, Dirt Diggers, (Red), John Henley, Cool Cats, (White), Wayne Norvell, Bo-Diddies, (Blue), and Jimmy Singdles, Hot Rods, (Green). Student Official's are Eddie White, Scorekeeper, Sandy Rhodes, and Stan James, Randy Still and Ronnie Massanelli, Timekeepers and Terry Turner and Danny Reyenga, Referees.

The Little League program takes care of boys in the 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th grades. The program is run entirely by students. Besides providing opportunities for youngsters to participate in team sports, this program provides excellent leadership training for the students that operate the league.

The teams play each Saturday morning beginning at 9:45 and league play will continue through February 18th.

NBA Cagers
Are Out for Revenge

By JACK STEVENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Humiliated a year ago, the West All-Stars of the National Basketball Association aim for revenge tonight against an East team which may or may not have the services of Wilt Chamberlain.

The 7-foot 1-inch bulwark of the division leading Philadelphia 76ers was in San Francisco but suffering from an Achilles heel injury.

His presence in the lineup for the Cow Palace game depends entirely on how he feels.

If Wilt decides against suiting up, Walt Bellamy of the New York Knicks was expected to join the squad to help out Bill Russell at the center spot as the East seeks its 12th victory in the 17-game series.

At Cincinnati in 1966, the East whipped a cold shooting West 137-94 with Chamberlain scoring 21 points.

"It won't be one-sided this time," promised Nate Thurmond, the 6-11 San Francisco Warrior who'll go against Chamberlain or Russell or both.

Nate's teammate, Rick Barry, last year's rookie sensation who is playing his second All-Star Game, went farther when he said, "I think our starting lineup is a little stronger than theirs."

Boston's Red Auerbach, returning to the coaching ranks for just one night, wasn't upset by the uncertainty of having Chamberlain and declared, "I quit worrying when I retired."

Auerbach, most successful coach in the NBA, gave up coaching after last season to concentrate on being general manager of the Celtics.

Fred Schaus of Los Angeles coaches the West.

In addition to Chamberlain or Russell, the starters for the East are Bailey Howell of Boston, Willis Reed of New York, Oscar Robertson of Cincinnati and Hal Greer of Philadelphia.

Opening for the West with Thurmond and Barry are Elgin Baylor and Jerry West of the last season divisional champion Los Angeles Lakers and Guy Rodgers of Chicago, who played with the Warriors a year ago.

Rounding out the East squad are John Havlicek of Boston, Jerry Lucas of Cincinnati, Don Ohl of Baltimore and Chet Walker of Philadelphia.

Bill Bridges and Len Wilkens of St. Louis, Dave Busschere of Detroit, Darrell Imhoff of Los Angeles and Jerry Sloan of Chicago are with the West.

Louisville Fears Small College

By BEN OLAN

Associated Press Sports Writer
It may not be in the cards for Louisville to overhaul top-ranked UCLA in The Associated Press' weekly basketball poll, but the Cardinals seem to have a more immediate problem.

The Southern Illinois Salukis, those small-college spoilers, are the unbeaten Cardinals' next opponents Wednesday night. The Salukis, No. 1 in the small college poll, upset high-ranking major college Texas Western last month. Wednesday night's meeting, too, is on Southern Illinois' court in Carbondale, Ill.

UCLA continued runaway leaders in the latest major-college poll, collecting 35 first-place votes and 359 points in the balloting by a national panel of 36 sports writers and broadcasters. Louisville drew the other vote for the top position and 324 points.

Points were awarded on a basis of 10 for a first-place vote, 9 for second etc. The voting was based on games through last Saturday.

New Mexico climbed one place to third while Houston also advanced a notch to fourth. UCLA lifted its record to 9-0 last week by beating Washington State 76-67. Louisville whipped Tulsa and North Texas for a 13-0 mark. New Mexico beat Denver and Seattle while Houston downed Tennessee Tech and Lamar Tech. New Mexico has an 11-1 record and Houston is 13-1.

Princeton's 91-81 victory over North Carolina helped the Tiggers move into the No. 7 spot and dropped the Tar Heels from third to fifth. Princeton was unranked a week ago.

Texas Western held sixth place. Kansas advanced from ninth to eighth. Providence slipped two places to ninth and Florida moved into the rankings in 10th place.

Cincinnati, No. 8 a week ago, plus Mississippi State and Bradley, tied for 10th last week, all tumbled from the rankings this week. The Bearcats lost to Tulsa. Bradley was beaten by Wichita, and Mississippi State dropped one to Florida.

The Top Ten, with first-place votes in parentheses, and total points:

1. UCLA (35) 359
2. Louisville (1) 324
3. New Mexico 227
4. Houston 203
5. North Carolina 201
6. Texas Western 164
7. Princeton 115
8. Kansas 101
9. Providence 106
10. Florida 31

Robinson's
Knee Seems Fit Again

By MIKE RECHT
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Robinson could not be as happy if he had won another Triple Crown — well, almost.

"The knee is coming along fine, faster than anyone thought it would," the Baltimore Orioles' slugging outfielder said Monday.

"I've been running on it about a week already, nothing fancy yet, just straight ahead, but I'll be able to increase the exercise."

The American League's Most Valuable Player was obviously relieved over the results of the Nov. 22 surgery and appeared fit as he answered questions at a Sporting Goods Fair luncheon.

"Just the idea of injuring a knee throws a scare into you after reading about all the serious knee injuries to athletes. This was the simplest kind of knee operation, but I'd still rather not have had it, no matter how simple. There's always some element of risk."

Robinson injured the right knee last June, but it did not keep him from hitting .316 with 49 home runs and 122 runs batted in to lead the league in all three categories in his first year with Baltimore. His bat powered the Orioles to a runaway pennant then helped sweep Los Angeles in the World Series.

The operation repaired the knee ligament and removed a bone chip. It never required a cast, only bandages, although he was on crutches for about a week. He's been exercising with weights and walking on it since then.

Arkansas Outdoors

FEEDING GAME AND BIRDS

Winter is a time of trial for animals and birds. Where we become bored, restless and tired of snow and ice, Nature presents each day to the inhabitants of the outdoors with the axiom of survival attached thereto. There are times when this axiom becomes almost impossible to follow.

Let's give this business of the backyard bird feeder a little further thought. By following your Solunar Tables, you can tell when to expect the peak activity at your feeder. By assuring the birds that at these times that the feeders will be full and ready for them, you can set up an activity pattern that will be rewarding to the extreme. One word of caution here might be indicated.

When you set up your feeder, place a container of grit inside it where it will be protected from the weather. So vitally important to birds, grit is hard for them to find in the winter months. A small amount goes a long way to take care of their needs.

If you plan on going away for a trip over the winter, do not start a feeding pattern. If you are only going to be gone for a short time, use a reservoir feeder that will carry a week's supply of precious food for the birds while you are gone. In short, if you cannot maintain a feeder, don't get into the bird-feeding business. All you will accomplish is to harm far more than you help.

You can help, but you can also hurt. Use your head as well as your heart.

Two of our major states have shown, this to the satisfaction of their own trained biologists, that undirected feeding of game and birds can be the most harmful move a sportsman can make during the cold months. Once game becomes accustomed to going to a feeder, they rely on it. Let that pattern of feeding become disrupted and the whole picture is thrown out of focus. Coveys of quail have starved to death right beside a feeder that they have been using until the donor dies. For some strange reason, sportsmen will put out bales of hay for deer when the going gets tough. As often as not, hay is just what the deer will eat. They would be happy to browse on tree limbs, on cut sunnys, on nearly everything except baled alfalfa. But hat they get and they often ignore, even while starving.

Perhaps the best all around feed for wildlife is corn. And in this one food lies a cycle of feeding that is fascinating. Most feeders put out by private individuals or state officers are wire baskets. Into these baskets is dumped a bushel or so of corn on the cob. Now the deer and other animals cannot get to the corn. Neither can the turkey.

But the squirrels... there is the key. A squirrel will enter the basket and pick the corn from the cob. All he eats is the very heart of the kernel, dropping the remainder to the ground where the other outdoor residents can feed on it.

Many communities have a group of dedicated men who each year give unselfishly of their time and money to see to it that a line of feeders is kept active all winter long. They will go out in weather where a mailman would shudder, often carrying corn to feeders on snowshoes, just to see to it that the pattern of feeding is not interrupted when it is vitally important. The animals they save each year cannot be measured, but rest assured that without their selfless aid, we would not have as many as we do. Deer can live for months on feeding, get in touch with your local game warden. This man can use all the help he can get when the going gets rough and if you are willing to donate an hour or so, he would be most happy to see to it that your efforts were not misdirected.

You can help, but you can also hurt. Use your head as well as your heart.

Academic Rule Is Argued

By JACK DONOVAN
Associated Press Sports Writer
HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Negro colleges, with enrollments from lower economic areas, allied today with the affluent Ivy League schools in a battle over the NCAA's controversial 1.6 academic rule.

The intent of the minimum grade point average rule is to make students out of athletes. The rule requires an athlete to maintain at least a 1.6 average to be eligible for participation in NCAA events or for athletic scholarships.

Six amendments have been offered to the rule, ranging from elimination, as proposed by the Eastern College Athletic Conference, to strengthening the requirement, as offered by the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The year-long controversy comes to a head at the final session of the NCAA 61st convention Wednesday.

William Wright, athletic director of Norfolk, Va., State College, a predominantly Negro school, said the present rule "penalizes boys from lower economic areas."

He said in the case of many Negro colleges "a boy was forced to meet a standard of academic standing before he had a chance to reach it."

Wright said some of these schools' students have a 1.2 or 1.4 average in a 4.0 grade scale. In effect, he said, the rule "asked an athlete to be smarter than the average student."

In giving the NCAA Council's report at Monday's opening session, Dr. Bradford Booth of UCLA said, "The intent of this legislation is simply to insist for the first time in the long history of intercollegiate athletics that athletes be students."

Asa Bushnell, commissioner of the Eastern College Athletic Conference, which has 144 NCAA members, said his group was opposed on the grounds it should be a matter decided by each institution.

College football coaches have joined irate television viewers in criticizing untimely commercials.

The American Football Coaches Association Rules Committee recommended Monday that television networks be more discreet on the timing of their advertisement breaks.

Jack Curtrice of the University of California, Santa Barbara, committee chairman, said, "We have recommended to commissioners that there be no such breaks when a team is on a drive."

He said the committee suggested nine rules changes and voted almost unanimously to retain the present unlimited substitution.

The proposed changes and the slap at TV commercials will be put before the NCAA football substitution.

The proposed changes and the slap at TV commercials will be put before the NCAA football Rules Committee meeting in Phoenix, Ariz., next week.

Arkansas Traveling League Meets Here

Viet Enemy Changed His Strategy

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) — Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam, said today the enemy changed his military strategy in 1966, but his objective remains the same: "To unify Vietnam by force as a Communist state."

Reviewing the allied war effort in 1966, Westmoreland told a news conference allied forces "have proven their effectiveness against the enemy." He made clear, however, he sees no quick, easy solution to the war and that factors such as pacification, politics and winning the support of the people play key roles.

In the coming year, he said, the conduct of the war will not likely undergo any spectacular changes and the Communists will continue to use propaganda and political maneuvers as weapons, as well as military force.

Westmoreland said allied gains included the opening of 30 per cent more of South Vietnam's roads to daily traffic than a year ago. He did not say how much mileage is considered open.

Allied logistic improvements included increases in the number of airfields that can handle jets from three to nine, of deep-draft ports from two to five, of shallow-draft ports from five to seven, and of storage for ammunition from 550,000 square feet to 2½ million, the general said.

In the fighting last year, he said, the South Vietnamese government lost 14,000 men killed or missing in action and the allies lost nearly 6,000. However, he noted that only one-third as many South Vietnamese soldiers were missing in action as in the previous year.

Westmoreland said the enemy's four basic objectives have not changed. They are to extend control over the people of South Vietnam, disrupt the Saigon government's efforts to rule, destroy the will to resist Communism, and unify Vietnam by force as a Communist state.

The change in North Viet-nam's military strategy, the four-star commander explained, resulted in a much greater use of North Vietnamese troops in South Vietnam and along its borders.

He said major North Vietnamese army units were positioned in the demilitarized zone and along the Cambodian border of the central highlands to divert South Vietnamese and allied troops from the more populated areas, provide a base for personnel in transit and supplies destined for other areas and to pose a threat to territory and nearby installations.

Westmoreland said North Vietnamese regulars took over most of the major fighting in the northern half of South Vietnam during 1966 and also provided a substantial number of replacements for main force units in the 3rd Corps area surrounding Saigon. There was a reduction in the flow of Communist manpower from the Mekong Delta to other areas, he added.

During the year, he said, total enemy strength was built up in excess of 280,000 men, despite claims that at least 50,000 enemy were killed and more than 20,000 defected to the government under the open-arms program.

"Based on information from captives, we believe that he (the Communist) now has in being, or in process of formation, nine divisions, seven of which are North Vietnamese army," Westmoreland said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court threw out today a $30,000 damages award against Time, Inc. The vote was 6 to 3.

The award, to the James J. Hill family of Old Greenwich, Conn., had been made under the New York Privacy law. Both the award and the law were challenged by Time, Inc., on First Amendment press freedom grounds.

In the controlling opinion, Justice William J. Brennan Jr. said that under the free speech guarantees damages awards for a magazine article like the one involved here can only be made on a showing that the article was published "with knowledge of its falsity or in reckless disregard of the truth."

Justice Abe Fortas wrote a dissent in which Chief Justice Earl Warren and Justice Tom C. Clark joined.

The award stemmed from an article in Life magazine Feb. 28, 1955. It linked the play, "The Desperate Hours," with the experiences of the Hill family, which had been held hostage by three escaped convicts in 1952.

Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon represented the Hills during two rounds of Supreme Court argument, last April and in October.

Nixon accused Life magazine of "substantial falsity and complete falsity" in likening events in the play to what happened to the Hills when they were held hostages in their home in Wilmershot Township, Pa.

Harold R. Medina Jr., attorney for Time, Inc., publisher of Life, defended the article as "basically true." He said the Hills' experiences were a "public fact" and that the picture article used "nondefamatory language about a public fact."

"The Desperate Hours" told of a "Hilliard" family held hostage by escaped convicts. Life used the former house of the Hills—they had moved to Connecticut by then — and actors from the play for the article and accompanying pictures.

The Hills sued in October 1955 under the New York law. It permits damage action when names or pictures are used, without written consent, "for advertising purposes or for the purposes of trade."

A jury returned a verdict awarding the family $175,000 in damages. This later was reduced to $80,000.

Settlement at Oil Firm

EL DORADO, Ark. (AP) — The Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers' Union announced Monday night a contract settlement between the OCAW and the American Oil Co. plant here.

The new 2-year contract was signed less than three hours before an extended deadline of midnight. The old contract expired Dec. 31 but was extended until midnight Monday.

More than 200 employees here were granted a 14-cent per hour wage increase. The average hourly wage for oil workers under the old contract was $3.55.

Vandals Hit British Town

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — A week-long campaign against vandalism was opened in a Birmingham exhibition hall Monday.

A few minutes later police were looking for someone who stole a box containing 800 badges saying, "I am lending a hand to stop vandals."

Some 50 better bowlers of the state met at Gaslite Bowl in Emmet Sunday where they held their monthly meeting.

This is a scratch league with the 5 man team average of 900 or better. Teams representing Little Rock, Benton, Malvern, Jacksonville, Hot Springs, Texarkana and Hope.

Bert Potter of Hot Springs rolled the high single game with a 237 and a 627 Series. Jim Wycoff of Little Rock was second with a 249 game.

Representing Gaslite Bowl were Aubrey Bailey, Captain, Gene Fravell, Ted Price, Jack Dailey and Wayne Bailey.

Georgia to Name a New Governor

By JOE ZELLNER
ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Georgia legislators set out today on an historic endeavor to elect a governor.

The election — approved by both the state and federal Supreme Courts — was the first judicially validated election of a governor by the legislators in 143 years.

The choice was between Democratic segregationist Lester Maddox and Republican conservative Howard H. Callaway. Neither got the required majority in the general election because of a write-in movement.

Maddox was the decided favorite in the 259-member General Assembly which has 229 Democrats. The Democratic nominee was confident. Callaway, whose chances obviously suffered a setback with the court decisions, held out hope.

Maddox ran second in the popular vote but got his boost when first the U. S. Supreme Court and later the Georgia Supreme Court upheld a provision of the state constitution which says the legislature shall break a stalemate.

House members dealt with another thorny problem during the opening day, seating civil rights worker Julian Bond.

Court rulings also opened the way for the seating of the 26-year-old Negro Democrat from Atlanta, who was denied his seat a year ago. He took the oath of office with several other members, and there was no challenge. Rep. James Floyd of Trion protested in a one-man walkout.

Bond was barred by the House last year because he endorsed a statement calling U. S. involvement in Vietnam aggression and murder. He also said he admired the courage of persons who burned their draft cards but would not burn his own. The Supreme Court ruled last month that the House erred when it refused to seat him.

LBJ Heading Into Tough Year 1967

By JAMES MARLOW
AP News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson is heading into his toughest year so far although 1967 doesn't promise to be a very exciting year by itself.

Yet, what happens in 1967 — and what happens to Johnson and what he makes happen — may determine whether he will seek re-election in 1968.

But events by themselves, unless Johnson makes some wretched mistakes in handling them, may not be the dominant factor in his decision to run again or in the Democrats' decision to make him their candidate again.

A very important factor and perhaps the most important one in the end — although hardly anything is being said about it now — is the kind of candidate the Republicans pick for their nominee in 1968.

It was extremely important when President Harry S. Truman ran against New York's Thomas E. Dewey and beat him in 1948.

Like Johnson after the death of President John F. Kennedy, when Truman took over after the death of President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1945, he rocked along on a great tide of sympathy and goodwill for a while.

Gradually, his troubles piled up. The cold war began and at home, as a result of the war, there were shortages in food and housing. As his troubles multiplied, his popularity went down. Price controls became a national irritant. As they gradually fell apart, inflation roared through the roof.

And this was the result: In the off-year elections of 1946 the Republicans for the first time since 1928 gained control of both House and Senate. His troubles with the Republican-run Congress became so intense that they evoked new sympathy for Truman, although not much, it seemed.

So, when the Democrats nominated him for a full term in 1948, they did so without much enthusiasm. Against Dewey he looked like a sure loser right up until half-way through election night.

Then came his truly tremendous and troublesome years: The creation of NATO, the Korean War, the assaults by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy. But if his standing with the electorate seemed low, it was anything but that with historians.

In 1962, ten years after he left the White House, a poll of 75 historians placed him among the near great among the presidents with the reservation that future historians might well list him with the great ones.

The popularity of Johnson's new presidency sailed through 1964, climaxed by an overwhelming victory over his Republican challenger, Sen. Barry Goldwater, who unwittingly aided and abetted Johnson's victory by being way out of step with his times, as the voters showed.

Then, in 1965, with the help of his Democratic-run Congress, Johnson reached new heights: He got through the greatest batch of major legislation in one year in American history.

Nevertheless, it was in 1965 that Johnson began to undermine his own popularity by the firm, strong stand he took in putting the United States up to its neck in the war in Vietnam.

But it wasn't until 1966 that the edge of his popularity wore off and the public opinion polls continually showed his prestige with the people going down.

It was in the off-year elections of 1966 — just as in the case of Truman in 1948 — that the popularity of Johnson's leadership landed in the basement. The Republicans, while not regaining control of Congress, won enough seats to cut down Democratic control. Even within his own party, particularly among governors, Johnson's leadership was attacked. And Congress in 1967 may spend sometime examining some of the Johnson programs already on the books than in approving new ones.

Therefore, this does not look like a very creative year in Congress. But it is in this year, with the Vietnamese war continuing, that Johnson must start rebuilding his political future if he hopes for the presidency again.

Perhaps Some Corporations Are Too Big

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business News Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — American Telephone has just reported total revenue for the three months ending with November of nearly $3.1 billion, which is a lot more revenue than a state the size of Texas collects in a year.

Comparisons such as this constantly reopen, or keep alive that old, old discussion of how big is too big, a question to which there is perhaps no sure answer.

American business is big. About 60 American corporations have annual income of a billion dollars or more, and when the measuring stick is dropped to $500 million we can count about 150 companies. Is this too big?

There are some obvious examples in American history of laws broken through monopoly power, of companies who used their size to corner a market, or manipulate rates, or dictate wage or marketing conditions.

These, however, were relatively easy to discern because specific antitrust regulations were violated.

How do you make a determination when laws are not clearly broken? For critical purposes, bigness is relative. What is small now would have been large 50 years ago. What is big in one industry is not in another.

General Motors, for example, is the largest manufacturing corporation in the world, with assets of more than $12 billion and income in the area of $2 billion a year.

Without a doubt a company of this size would dominate the textile or shoe industries. But the automotive industry is a business of big companies, perhaps a requirement of volume production. Ford, Chrysler and General Motors are among the top five companies in sales.

Standard Oil of New Jersey and General Electric are the others. Chase Manhattan Bank reviewed recent literature and distilled these are the prevalent

Florida Law Struck Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court struck down today the 1966 reapportionment of the Florida Legislature, holding that it fell short of the high court's "one man, one vote" standards.

The 7-2 decision, reversing a ruling by the U.S. District Court in Miami, was given by Justice Byron R. White. Justices John M. Harlan and Potter Stewart dissented.

The District Court endorsed the plan last March though it found over-representation in Senate districts of up to 15.90 per cent and under-representation of up to 10.56 per cent. In examining the House districts the court found deviations of up to 18.28 per cent.

— not necessarily proven— charges against big business: — It decides which products to make and then forces them on the public.

— It dominates education by forcing schools to teach subjects that meet job requirements.

— It governs the labor market, forcing individuals to adapt skills and educations to its needs.

— It magnifies unemployment problems by refusing to hike the unskilled and by failing to move into depressed areas.

Even if these accusations are accepted, could the truth of them be established in regard to a specific company? Would it take a long, long investigation with inconclusive answers?

A long, long investigation is now under way of AT&T, which dominates its industry as perhaps no other company in America dominates an area of enterprise.

AT&T is the world's largest corporation, owning and operating 85 per cent of the nation's telephones. It has assets well over $30 billion, employs 800,000 workers—despite automation—and has nearly three million shareholders.

AT&T is unique. It rules its industry but with far less freedom than can a manufacturing enterprise. It is regulated by the Federal Communications Commission and state utilities commissions. And, because of its unique role, must also accept considerable social responsibilities.

The FCC now is studying the entire cost, price and profit structure of AT&T, which feels it needs an 8 per cent return on its capital in order to fulfill its obligations to customers and stockholders.

We judge ourselves by what we feel capable of doing, while others judge us by what we have already done.—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, American poet.

THE DOCTOR'S MAILBAG
Treatment Depends on Nature of Kidney Stones
By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Q—Where can I buy orthophosphate or the magnesium oxide tablets your recently recommended to prevent the formation of kidney stones?
A—Magnesium oxide is available in any pharmacy, but the dose you should take must be determined by your doctor. The orthophosphates used by British doctors consisted of potassium phosphate and sodium phosphate blended in such a way as to give a hydrogen ion concentration (pH) of 7.4. Recent reports indicate that trihydroxymethylamino methane (Tham-E) is effective in dissolving kidney stones.

It must be remembered, however, that kidney stones may have various chemical components and the type of stone to be dissolved or prevented must be known before appropriate treatment can be prescribed.

Q—I am a 22-year-old man. I have chloasma about the eyes and temples. What could cause it? Is there any cure, or will it go away in time?
A—In women the most frequent causes of these light brown so-called liver spots are pregnancy and diseases of the ovaries but other causes applicable to either sex include diseases of the pituitary and adrenal glands and pellagra. Women may also get them from using estrogen skin creams or cosmetics that contain oil of bergamot.

The condition is not serious. There is no satisfactory treatment. You should avoid exposure to sunlight as that intensifies the spots. They are not likely to disappear spontaneously.

Q—I am 65 years old. I have started to menstruate again very slightly every month. What could cause this?
A—The commonest cause of uterine bleeding that occurs after the menopause is cancer of the uterus. Bleeding may also occur in women with very large fibroids, very high blood pressure, calcium deficiency, purpura or scurvy and from taking too large a dosage of female hormones. The cause should be determined without delay.

Q—My medical report reads: "Chronic cervicitis and leionymata." What are these conditions?
A—Cervicitis is an inflammation of the cervix (neck) of the uterus usually due to a low-grade infection. Leionymata are benign muscular tumors closely related to uterine fibroids.

Q—I have heard that a sign of pregnancy is when the basal temperature remains up at postovulatory level for 40 days or more. Does the temperature come back down while a woman is pregnant?
A—The basal temperature rises from the lower level when ovulation occurs and remains elevated for about 14 days, then falls just before the next menstrual period starts. If pregnancy occurs, the temperature continues on the higher level for five or six days beyond the date of the expected period, then falls.

Q—A man wrote a bristling letter to the widow next door, accusing her of stealing his lawn mower. He happened to be wrong, and she sued him for defamation of character. But the court denied her claim, because the man had not made the charge known to anyone else but her.

Suppose that such a letter, although mailed to one particular individual, is also read by a third party. If the writer should have foreseen that eventually, then he may indeed be held responsible for making his accusation public.

Thus:
A wholesale grocery salesman, irked at one of his customers, wrote him a scurrilous letter. But the customer's secretary opened the letter and read it before passing it along to her boss.

Was the salesman liable for defamation? The court said yes, because he was familiar with the secretary's habit of checking the mail. The court said he should have foreseen that his accusations would become public just the way they did.

But there is no liability if the third party, even though he sees or hears the accusation, cannot understand it.
In one case, a virtuous woman was accused of immorality—in front of her very young children. A court found no defamation, since the children had no idea what the words meant.

"The essence of the injury," said the court, "is the effect upon the minds of the hearers." And here there was no effect at all.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Oswald & James Jacoby
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Today's hand from the "Ace of Spies" shows Jason Winkman playing a four-spade contract against Charley Solomon, one of our all-time great bridge players.

Winkman's first comment on the hand is, "Never mind the bidding. Almost everyone got to four spades, poor players because they don't know how to bid and experts by calculated misbidding."

We disagree with this. The bidding in the box shows how North and South should bid to the spade game.

Charley opened the four of clubs. Here is Winkman's description of the play.

"I read him for a short club suit and probably three spades. The way the cards lie the hand is a cinch but it doesn't require much analysis to see that a fellow might go down if he worked at it. You are off two red aces. There may be a club ruff and there may be a natural club loser. Transportation is very tight. This isn't a normal newspaper hand. There are too many problems involved."

No Man Is Above the Law—Not Even Powell

The Democratic caucus of the House of Representatives on Monday stripped Adam Clayton Powell of his post as chairman of the Education and Labor Committee, and the odds are the House will refuse to seat him for his new term as a congressman.

The Harlem preacher and politician screamed at the last moment that he was being persecuted because he was a Negro. For propaganda purposes some Negro leaders profess to believe that—but citizens generally, both black and white, have read the charges against Powell for many months and know that the accusation of bias simply isn't true. What is true is exactly the reverse: Powell has deliberately traded on the fact he is a Negro to protect him in wholesale graft of public funds that would have retired a white politician years ago.

But Powell's scandals became too much for even his liberal political friends and in the end they put him out of office and defied the Negro bloc vote.

There is a deadly parallel between the Negro Powell and James Hoffa, white head of the powerful Teamsters Union. Both were corrupt. Both traded on the fact they had behind them vast vote-getting organizations—but both were brought to justice in the traditional American way. It speaks well for the inherent good character of the Congress that it finally acted against Powell despite the political risk that was involved.

As for Powell, he has dishonored the Negro movement which put him in a position of eminence and power only to see him switch public funds to private purposes and risk expulsion from public life and arouse public distrust of his followers. But rank and file Negroes know this is an old story among whites also. The remedy, whatever your race, is to get a new and trustworthy leader.

Congress Is Against Take Hike

By WILLIAM T. PEACOCK
WASHINGTON (AP) — A sampling of sentiment in the new Congress, as indicated by a poll among the members, is strongly against a tax increase but with a reservation of readiness to do whatever is required to finance the Vietnam war.

As to the war itself, the preponderant view is for a greater effort to wind it up speedily, reflecting a high degree of impatience with how things are going now.

Views of how to get on to a settlement ranged from far greater use of military power, particularly bombing, to a stepped up diplomatic offensive.

The questions asked in the poll were these:

1. Vietnam: Do you favor present policies in the Vietnam war? If not, what do you suggest?

2. Taxes: Are you in favor of new taxes to support the Vietnam war and the home war on poverty?

Replies were received from about 40 per cent of the Senate and House membership. Many could not be reached before Congress convened.

On both subjects, the responses were usually highly qualified, so much so as to prohibit their tabulation in precise categories.

Running through many of the comments was an off-sounded note of complaint that neither members of Congress nor the American people were getting all the information they should about policies and intentions as to Vietnam.

This reflection of the mood of the convening Congress came amid increasing indications that President Johnson will not ask for a tax increase, at least for the present, even though the last word from him was that he had not made up his mind.

Congressional leaders are laying out work schedules on the assumption that a tax increase will not be among the President's early requests.

Powell's Successor to Account for All Money That's Spent

By JOHN KOENIG JR.
WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Carl D. Perkins, the Kentuckian due to succeed Rep. Adam Clayton Powell as chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, says "every penny of money it spends will be accounted for."

Perkins, 54, finds himself in line to head the committee because, among other things, Powell was accused by a House committee of deception in handling his committee's travel spending.

As No. 2 Democrat on the committee Perkins became its chairman apparent Monday when House Democrats voted to strip Powell of his chairmanship.

"I did not seek this position in this manner," Perkins told newsmen — and added that he did not vote on the question of ousting Powell.

But Perkins, beginning his 10th term, quickly tabbed federal aid for school construction and vocational education as priority items for the committee to consider.

He sponsored the Vocational Education Act of 1963 and the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, partly to help fight poverty in his eastern Kentucky hill region district, economically one of the poorest in the nation and site of some of the nation's most active coal mines.

Perkins says his committee "will be operated in a democratic and above board manner. Any rules the committee wants to adopt will be okay with me."

Late last year, dissident committee members slightly weakened Powell's powers as chairman because of dissatisfaction with the flamboyant New Yorker.

Perkins says he has no quarrel with Powell and that they cooperated with no difficulty. He said he does not anticipate any mass firings from a committee pay roll found by House investigators to be one of the most extensive in the Capitol.

A farm boy from Hindman, Ky., where he still lives, Perkins got a law degree by attending evening classes in the old Jefferson School of Law at Louisville, Ky.

Adams Field Work Delayed

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — An engineer on the proposed expansion project of Adams Field here said Monday a delay of one year would result because a federal grant of $1.4 million had been refused.

The prediction came from Gordon Grayson.

S. J. Beauchamp, chairman of the Airport Commission, said a committee had been appointed to study possible ways of financing the proposed $6.3 million project.

Artmobile to Visit in Hope Jan. 11

The exhibit "18th and 19th Century Fine Art in America" will be on view in The Arkansas Arts Center Artmobile while it is in Hope, Jan. 11-13.

The exhibit consists of 17 pieces, twelve of which are from the permanent collection of the Arkansas Arts Center.

While in Hope, the huge gallery-on-wheels will be parked at The Shopping Center. There is no admission charge.

Among the paintings are the Samuel F. B. Morse portrait of Gen. James Miller, the first territorial governor of Arkansas and the Charles Bird King portrait of Gen. George Izard, the second territorial governor. Although Morse is best known for the invention of the telegraph, he was one of the most important American painters of the 19th century. The exhibition also includes a hand-colored engraving by John James Audubon, "Five Birds," and a watercolor by Winslow Homer, "Mountain Landscape." Homer is one of the great American artists and is particularly noted for his watercolors. The watercolor in the exhibition is on loan from the Addison Gallery of American Art in Andover, Mass.

The first Artmobile tour of the state began in December 1962. Between then and the beginning of the current tour, the Artmobile visited 159 communities and was viewed by 428,182 persons. The two previous exhibitions consisted of "17th Century Dutch Paintings" from the Walter P. Chrysler Collection and "Paintings and Sculpture from the Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Folk Art Collection, Williamsburg, Virginia."

Designed exclusively for The Arkansas Arts Center, the Artmobile was a gift of Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Rockefeller, Mr. and Mrs. David Rockefeller, and The Barton Foundation of El Dorado, Arkansas. Fuel is provided by the Lion Oil Company. The Artmobile's visit to Hope will be sponsored by Hope Junior Auxiliary.

Thomasson in Line for Job

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Jerry K. Thomasson of Arkadelphia, the defeated Republican candidate for attorney general, reportedly is in line for an appointment to the Arkansas Public Service Commission.

Several such rumors circulated at the Capitol Monday, saying Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller would make the appointment within a few days.

There was no confirmation from GOP sources.

Legislature to Hear Addresses

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas Legislature marked time today while its members said goodbye to a six-term governor and swore in his Republican replacement.

The farewell address of Gov. Orval Faubus and the oath-taking of Gov.-elect Winthrop Rockefeller and other constitutional officers were the only items of consequence on the agenda for the second day of the session.

The legislature convened at noon Monday and less than an hour later, the Senate had given the first rebuff to Rockefeller, the state's first Republican governor in 94 years.

Rockefeller asked the Senate through an aide to hold up confirmation of 93 appointments made by Faubus. The Senate rejected the request in executive session and approved all of the appointments, most of them to minor boards and commissions.

Rockefeller said later that he would have a strong statement about the Senate action Wednesday "after I'm governor."

Legislators made it clear on opening day that this will be a busy session. Bills and resolutions flooded the hoppers in both houses and some of the first-day measures will be among the most important bills of the session.

Rep. Hays McClerkin of Texarkana and Rep. Charles Stewart of Fayetteville co-sponsored a bill to prohibit elected public officials and public employees from having any interest, financial or otherwise, which might conflict with proper discharge of their duties.

Rep. Bill Wells of Hermitage introduced a bill to create a State Government Reorganization Commission with eight members empowered to recommend streamlining, consolidation and reorganization of state agencies.

Two proposals to change the law on the term of the governor were introduced. Sen. Oscar Alagood of Little Rock proposed an amendment to set a four-year term without the right of succession.

Rep. Joe Hamilton of Harrison tossed in a proposed constitutional amendment to prohibit a governor from serving more than two two-year terms in succession. Rep. Carl Ledbetter Jr. of Little Rock and Rep. Leon Holsted of North Little Rock co-sponsored a proposed amendment to lower the voting age from 21 to 18.

Rep. Jack Oakes and 50 others introduced the expected bill to grant university status to Arkansas State College. The bill would "promote" the college in name only. A similar bill was introduced in the Senate.

Congress to Get Message From Johnson

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 90th Congress convenes today and within hours will hear from President Johnson what he wants it to do this year.

The President is scheduled to deliver his State of the Union message in the House chamber at 9:30 p.m. EST, only 9½ hours after the first banging of the gavel for this less heavily Democratic Congress.

Congressional leaders expect Johnson to call for revisions of the draft law; continuance, probably with reduced financing, of "Great Society" programs enacted by the 89th Congress; from $10 billion to $15 billion extra to finance the war in Vietnam, and increased Social Security benefits.

Amidst signs that he will continue a wait-and-see policy on taxes, leaders do not expect an immediate request for a tax increase.

Johnson will be facing a House with a 248-187 Democratic edge, down 47 seats since the last election, and a Senate controlled by Democrats 64 to 36, off 3 Democratic seats since November.

Before the President goes to Capitol Hill tonight, members of Congress will be grappling with organizational and rules battles.

Sparking opening day in the House is the dispute over whether to seat Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D-N.Y.

House Democrats, ignoring their leadership's pleas to go easy, stripped Powell Monday of his chairmanship of the Education and Labor Committee.

Here are the situations on other start-of-session matters:

— Sen. Joseph S. Clark of Pennsylvania, a liberal, and Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, generally pro-administration except on civil rights, are the expected candidates for secretary of the Democratic Conference at a Senate Democratic caucus today. Sen. Fred R. Harris of Oklahoma dropped out Monday from the race for the No. 3 leadership post.

— Sen. George Murphy of California and Sen. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania are matched for Republican Senate campaign chairman at a party caucus. Murphy is favored, Republicans also are picking a Senate Conference chairman, probably Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine.

— The House may battle over a rule adopted several years ago to keep legislation from being bottled up in the Rules Committee. Democrats voted Monday to retain it but Republicans want it modified to remove some of the speaker's discretion in using it.

— The Senate will not take up until Wednesday a bipartisan move to make it easier to cut off filibusters.

$20 Million State Deal

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A deal valued at $27.9 million involving the purchase of 20 independent telephone companies in 11 states, including Arkansas, was announced Monday by Continental Telephone Co.

The company said it will pay about $1.2 million in cash and use about one million of its common shares to acquire the companies.

Chinese in Midst of Revolution

TOKYO (AP) — Opponents of Mao Tse-tung in the big port city of Shanghai were accused today of resorting to economic warfare in an effort to disrupt Red China's production and finances.

Shanghai "revolutionary workers" made the charge in a message to Mao reported by the New China News Agency.

Pro-Mao workers in Shanghai walked off their jobs and paralyzed communications, transportation and utilities.

The message to Mao today said a handful of reactionary Communist leaders in Shanghai "not reconciled to their defeat" are "playing new tricks. Using material benefits as bait to corrupt some workers ideologically, they have attempted to lead the masses onto the evil road of economicism, so as to shift the general orientation of the struggle, disrupt production and the state finances, and sabotage the great proletarian cultural revolution."

It said the "staunch revolutionary left" have seen through these schemes, have stood out against these economic lures, and rebuffed what it called "sugar-coated bullets."

It said the pro-Maoists would "seize complete victory" and firmly oppose "putting banknotes in command."

Red China's Premier Chou En-lai was reported today to have called for a letup in attacks on five of his vice premiers by the militant Maoist forces who have created chaos and violence on the mainland.

Japanese correspondents in Peking said Chou made his plea for restraint at one of the continuing high-level meetings of Mao's purge group in Peking Sunday with Mao's sharp-tongued wife, Chiang Ching, present.

The faction led by Mao and Defense Minister Lin Biao meanwhile stepped up their denunciation of the power group led by General Liu Shao-chi, party General Secretary Teng Hsiao-ping and Tao Chu, a vice premier who until a week ago was regarded as one of Mao's men. Chou was quoted as saying he approved criticism of his trio.

Other reports from Peking told of the sudden takeover of the capital's police forces by the Ministry of Public Security, the virtual kidnapping of Liu's wife, Wang Kuang-mei, by Red Guards, a demand that "counter-revolutionaries" be dealt with by law, and hints of possible new worker violence in Shanghai.

Except for an eyewitness report of Red Guard brutality toward doctors, nurses and anti-Mao workers in a Canton hospital, there were no new Chinese accounts of violence today on the scale reported to have occurred in Nanking and Shanghai last week.

Americans Start Big Offensive

By ROBERT TUCKMAN

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) — A massive American force backed by planes, armor and artillery has launched the biggest offensive of the Vietnam war in an attempt to sweep the Viet Cong out of the jungled "Iron Triangle" 20 to 30 miles north of Saigon.

The objective is to capture a major headquarters complex of the Communists and to clear enemy troops from the tangled forests from which they menace the South Vietnamese capital.

Gen. William C. Westmoreland's command announced the multidivision operation was launched at dawn Sunday. It said in the first three days 92 Viet Cong have been killed and 16 taken prisoner.

The operation includes evacuation of up to 10,000 Vietnamese peasants living in the long-time Viet Cong bastion and their resettlement in other localities.

Westmoreland told newsmen that the enemy had changed his military strategy in 1966, but that his objective remains the same: "To unify Vietnam by force as a Communist state."

In a year-end review, he said the enemy strength in South Vietnam exceeds 280,000 men, and infiltration from North Vietnam more than 8,000 men a month.

Other than the drive in the Iron Triangle, no major engagements were reported by the U.S. and South Vietnamese commands.

U.S. headquarters said American Marines took sporadic mortar and small arms fire in their sweep of Thanh Phu Peninsula 55 miles south of Saigon in the Mekong Delta. But there has been no contact of any size since the Leathernecks landed last Friday, and so far only four enemy have been reported killed and five taken prisoner.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported 45 Viet Cong killed by government troops in repulsing two attacks on military posts 340 and 348 miles northeast of Saigon.

South Korea's Tiger Division reported 26 Viet Cong killed, 212 captured and 621 suspects pulled in during operation Maeng Ho 6, which has been going on since Jan. 3 about 13 miles south of Qui Nhon. The Koreans do not announce their own casualties.

Continuing bad weather once again hampered the U.S. air offensive over North Vietnam, and American pilots flew only 60 strike and reconnaissance missions Monday.
